Textured image with flowers

Instructions No. 3544

Difficulty: Advanced

Working time: 1 hour 30 Minutes

Textured pictures with floral motifs are currently very popular as decorative murals. structure paste Our instructions show you how easy it is to create impressive floral motifs on a stretched canvas using a little paint and stretched canvas,. This technique adds depth and texture to your artwork and is an exciting project for beginners and experienced artists alike.

1. Preparing the stretcher frame

First you will prime the stretched canvas . To do this, use a paint sponge and apply the primer evenly to the canvas. The primer will allow your subsequent color and texture application to be painted with improved adhesion and an even look.

Allow the stretched canvas to dry completely before continuing with the next step.

Paint the entire surface of the stretcher frame with VBS handicraft paint in antique green.

2. Test the technique
While the stretched canvas is drying, test the modelling of a flower on a sheet of paper Paper. This will give you a feel for how to use the spatula, with the structure paste and help you plan your textured image.

To create a flower: put some structure paste on the underside of your palette knife and press it carefully onto the painting surface. You have just created your first petal. In this way, you will gradually form a three-dimensional flower.

VBS structure paste without grain

VBS structure paste with fine grain

VBS structure paste with coarse grain

I like to use the VBS structure paste with different grain sizes:
VBS structure paste without grit dries to a smooth surface texture. This is often used for modeling work with fine details, the smooth structure can be further processed with a bamboo skewer, for example by inserting small dots.

The VBS structure pastes with fine grain and with coarse grain produce different looks: Flowers modeled with a coarse grain look particularly three-dimensional.

3. Creating three-dimensional flowers and leaves with structure paste
Now the creative part begins: designing textured flowers and leaves on your stretched canvas. Model more flowers and leaves on the stretched canvas. according to your taste

Finish your project
When your artwork is completely dry, you can proudly present it or continue to design it with colors and other materials. Your finished textured picture is guaranteed to attract everyone's attention!
